ORDER:

(1) DENYING PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS, ADOPTING REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION, AND
DENYING MOTION FOR EVIDENTIARY HEARING

[Doc. No. 1, 16, 20]

(2) DENYING MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

[Doc. No. 18]

(3) DENYING CERTIFICATE OF APPEALABILITY

25 On October 16, 2015, Petitioner Maurice Hillard, a state prisoner proceeding pro se 26 and in forma pauperis, filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus. (Doc. No. 1.) Following 27 a 2004 jury trial, Petitioner was convicted of sixteen separate offenses, including grand 28 theft, conspiracy to commit grand theft, attempted grand theft, burglary, receiving stolen

1 property, unlawful taking and driving of a vehicle, and resisting an officer. (Doc. No. 13-2 13 at 75-118; Doc. No. 13-19 at 20-21); see also People v. Maurice Hillard et al., No.
3 D045175 (Cal. Ct. App. April 19, 2005) (unpublished). Petitioner's life sentence rested, 4 in part, on sentencing enhancements under California's Three Strikes Law arising from 5 Petitioner's prior felony convictions for attempted murder and attempted robbery. (Doc.
6 No. 13-13 at 117-18; Doc. No. 13-9 at 1440-45.) Petitioner unsuccessfully appealed his 7 conviction before the California Court of Appeal, People v. Hillard, No. D045175 (Cal.
8 Ct. App. Aug. 26, 2005), as well as the California Supreme Court, People v. Hillard, 9 S143767 (Cal. May 26, 2006).

10 After exhausting his opportunities for direct appeal, Petitioner filed a state habeas 11 petition with the California Superior Court, Hillard v. Felker, HC18820 (Cal. Super. Ct.
12 Feb. 26, 2007), the California Court of Appeal, In re Maurice Hillard, D051127 (Cal. Ct.
13 App. June 16, 2007), and the California Supreme Court, Hillard v. Scribner, S158679 14 (Cal. Nov. 30, 2007). All of Petitioner's state habeas petitions were denied. Finally, 15 Petitioner filed a federal habeas petition in the Southern District of California. Hillard v.
16 Small, No. 08-1786-DMS-RBB (S.D. Cal. Sept 30, 2008.) This petition was denied on 17 the merits, id., ECF No. 36, and both the district court and the Ninth Circuit denied 18 Petitioner a certificate of appealability, id., EFC Nos. 36, 43; Hillard v. Small, No. 10-19 56581 (9th Cir. Oct. 8, 2010), ECF No. 6.

20 In 2012, California voters approved Proposition 36, which retroactively made the 21 Three Strikes Law more lenient. See People v. Yearwood, 213 Cal. App. 4th 161, 167-68 22 (2013) (describing Proposition 36). However, Proposition 36 did not extend relief to 23 certain categories of offenders, including those, like Petitioner, that had been convicted of 24 attempted murder. Id.; see also Cal. Penal Code § 1170.126. In 2015, Petitioner filed a 25 petition to recall his sentence pursuant to Proposition 36, (Doc. No. 1 at 9-18), but the 26 petition was denied, (Doc. No. 13-32 at 92-93).

27 ///

28 ///

1 In the present federal habeas petition,¹ Petitioner alleges this refusal to recall his 2 sentence violated his due process rights because (1) his two prior convictions arose from 3 the same act against the same victim, (2) the state court improperly found his petition for 4 recall was untimely, and (3) the state court erred by ignoring his claim his 1986 5 conviction for attempted murder was tainted by prosecutorial misconduct. (Doc. No. 1 at 6 9-27.) On December 11, 2015, Defendant filed an answer and notice of lodgment. (Doc.
 7 Nos. 12, 13.) Petitioner filed a traverse on December 28, 2015. (Doc. No. 14.) On 8 August 19, 2016, the magistrate judge filed a Report and Recommendation 9 recommending the petition be denied. (Doc. No. 16.) On August 30, 2016, Petitioner 10 filed a motion for summary judgment and a motion for an evidentiary hearing. (Doc.
 11 Nos. 18, 20.) Petitioner filed an objection to the Report and Recommendation on 12 September 14, 2016. (Doc. No. 21.)

13 For the following reasons, the Court adopts the Report and Recommendation and 14 denies the petition for writ of habeas corpus. The Court denies Petitioner's motion for 15 summary judgment on the same grounds as his petition and denies Petitioner's motion for 16 an evidentiary hearing as unnecessary.

17 BACKGROUND

18 I. FACTUAL HISTORY

19 The Court adopts the facts from the California Court of Appeal opinion denying 20 Petitioner's direct appeal and affirming his convictions. See People v. Maurice Hillard et 21 al., No. D045175 (Cal. Ct. App. April 19, 2005) (unpublished); (see also Doc. No. 13-22 19). Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1), the Court presumes these facts to be correct and 23

 25 ¹ Although Petitioner previously filed a habeas petition with regard to his 2004 sentence, the present 26 petition challenges a different judgment, namely the 2015 denial of his petition to recall. Magwood v.
 27 Patterson, 561 U.S. 320, 333 (2010) (“the phrase ‘second or successive’ must be interpreted with respect 28 to the judgment challenged”). The California Superior Court, the California Court of Appeal, and the California Supreme Court denied his petition to recall because relief was unavailable for Petitioner, who had been previously convicted of attempted murder. (Doc. No. 13-32 at 92-93; Doc. No. 13-35; Doc.
 No. 13-37.)

1 Petitioner has not met his burden of rebutting the presumption by clear and convincing 2 evidence.

3 Petitioner's current imprisonment stems from his conviction for sixteen separate 4 offenses, including grand theft, conspiracy to commit grand theft, attempted grand theft, 5 burglary, receiving stolen property, unlawful taking and driving of a vehicle, and 6 resisting an officer. (Doc. No. 13-20 at 2.) Petitioner and his accomplice, Charles 7 Calhoun ("Calhoun"), robbed multiple ATMs between July and October 2003. (Id. at 2-8 3.) During the same time period, Petitioner and Calhoun also committed burglaries not 9 connected to ATMs. (Id.)

10 Petitioner and Calhoun were arrested on October 9, 2003, after police were able to 11 track their position using a locator system installed in the vehicle they stole. (Id.)
12 Calhoun was driving the stolen vehicle at the time and led the police on a high-speed 13 chase, using both sides of the road at times in an attempt to evade the officers. (Id. at 3-14 4.) At trial, the prosecution presented evidence regarding a large number of criminal 15 charges:

16 The events of the night of defendants' arrest formed the evidentiary 17 basis for their convictions of conspiracy to commit grand theft (count 1); 18 unlawful taking or driving of the United Rentals truck (count 2); unlawful 19 taking or driving of the Nissan truck (count 3); resisting a police officer 20 (count 8); and (as to Calhoun) evading an officer with reckless driving (count 5) and harming or interfering with an officer's animal (count 7).

21 Evidence supporting the remaining counts of receiving stolen 22 property, unlawful taking or driving of a vehicle, burglary, grand theft and 23 attempted grand theft arose from the common modus operandi combined 24 with various items of circumstantial evidence. We summarize some of this 25 evidence. To support receiving stolen property from various victims (count 26 6): various stolen license plates were found in the Nissan truck left by 27 defendants at the industrial complex. To support the taking of the 28 ThyssenKrupp truck (count 9): a ThyssenKrupp hard hat that had been stolen in the stolen ThyssenKrupp truck was found in the Nissan truck. To support the unlawful taking of the ICI Paints truck (count 10): a license plate registered to ICI Paints (that was stolen at the same time as the ICI Paints truck) was found in the Nissan truck. To support the Hall of Champions

1 burglary and grand thefts (counts 11 and 12): a rack from the stolen 2 ThyssenKrupp truck was found outside the Hall of Champions building the 3 morning after the theft. Further, a handwritten list of ATM locations which 4 included the Hall of Champions location was found at Hillard's residence.
 5 To support the burglary at Dominic's Deli (count 13): a security guard 6 observed a truck leave the parking lot near the deli on the night of the 7 burglary that looked like the stolen ThyssenKrupp truck. To support the 8 taking of the Sherwin Williams truck and the burglary and theft at the 9 Chevron station (count 14, 15, and 16): a surveillance video at the Chevron 10 station depicted a truck with the Sherwin Williams logo and showed two 11 persons who (the prosecution argued) matched defendants in size and shape.
 12 To support the taking of the Davies Electric truck and the Beacon Gas 13 station burglary and attempted theft (counts 17, 18 and 19): at the time of the 14 burglary, a witness saw two males at the gas station and a truck with the 15 Davies Electric logo parked in front of the station. A surveillance video 16 showed a person who (the prosecution argued) had the same body type as 17 Calhoun.

18 The police found various items in the United Rentals truck likely used 19 in the ATM thefts, including a metal chain coiled in a bucket, a dolly, and a 20 crowbar. When the United Rentals truck was stolen, it had been parked 21 behind a locked fence at the Davies Electric yard; the padlock and chain that 22 had secured the fence at the Davies Electric yard were found in the Nissan 23 truck. [Footnote omitted] In the Nissan the police also found such items as 24 bolt cutters and discs for cutting metal, pry bars, a chisel, and metal shavings 25 that were similar to those observed around the stolen ATM machines. Items 26 found at Hillard's residence included a lock-picking kit, a police 27 communications scanner, and drilling tools including a specialized tool for 28 drilling through metal. The police also found instructional materials discussing such matters as bypassing burglar alarms and locks, drilling through safes, breaking into vehicles, and money laundering. One section of the instructional materials described the modus operandi used by defendants; i.e., using a heavy chain to wrap around an ATM and pulling the ATM out with a stake bed truck. Cell phone records showed 474 phone calls between Calhoun's and Hillard's cell phones during October 2002 to October 2003.

(Doc. No. 13-20 at 30-32.)

26 II. STATE PROCEDURAL HISTORY

27 On July 1, 2004, a San Diego County Superior Court jury convicted Hillard and 28 Calhoun of one count of conspiracy to commit grand theft, six counts of unlawful taking

1 and driving a vehicle, four counts of burglary, two counts of grand theft, and one count
2 each of attempted grand theft, receiving stolen property, and resisting an officer. (Doc.
3 No. 13-13 at 75-118; Doc. No. 13-19 at 20-21.) The jury found them not guilty on one 4 count of attempted burglary and found Calhoun guilty of evading an officer with reckless 5 driving and harming or interfering with an officer's animal. (Id.)

6 The charging document alleged that Petitioner qualified for sentencing 7 enhancement under California's Three Strike Law because of two previous convictions.
8 (Doc. No. 13-12 at 32.) In 1986, Petitioner had been convicted of attempted burglary and 9 attempted murder. (Id.) According to the Court of Appeal:

10 The two strike prior convictions arose from an incident in November 11 1985 when Hillard and two co-defendants attempted to rob a jewelry store.
12 One of the co-defendants burst into the store and placed a rifle against the 13 store owner's chest. The owner grabbed the rifle away and the co-defendant 14 fled from the store, yelling to Hillard and the other co-defendant to "get 15 him." The owner pulled a pistol from his pocket but before he could fire the 16 weapon, Hillard shot the owner in the arm with a rifle and then continued 17 shooting. The owner was struck seven more times, three times in the chest, 18 three times in the leg, and once on his nose.

19 (Doc. No. 13-20 at 47.)

20 Petitioner waived his right to a separate jury trial regarding the priors, (Doc. No.
21 13-13 at 71; see also Doc. No. 13-8 at 229), and the trial judge found his prior felony 22 convictions constituted two prison priors and two strikes under California's Three Strikes 23 Law. (Doc. No. 13-8 at 237-38.) The trial judge found that state law required they be 24 treated as separate strikes. (Id. at 238.) Thus, on September 20, 2004, Petitioner was 25 sentenced to 15 terms of 25 years to life, three of which were stayed and the rest ordered 26 to run consecutively, a one-year concurrent term for the misdemeanor offense of resisting 27 an officer, and a one-year consecutive term for each of the prison priors. (Doc. No. 13-13 28 at 75-118; Doc. No. 13-19 at 20-21.)

Petitioner appealed his conviction to the California Court of Appeal. (Doc. No.
13-14); see also Appellant's Opening Brief, People v. Hillard, No. D045175 (Cal. Ct.

1 App. Aug. 26, 2005). He argued that (1) there was insufficient evidence for three of the 2 unlawful taking of a vehicle counts, (2) the trial court abused its discretion in refusing to 3 strike one of the priors because they arose from a single criminal act, (3) remand was 4 necessary because the trial court was unaware it had discretion to impose concurrent 5 rather than consecutive sentences, (4) the sentence was cruel and unusual, and (5) the 6 consecutive sentences were improper because the jury had not found the underlying 7 priors occurred on separate occasions. (Id.) The California Court of Appeal rejected 8 Petitioner's arguments and affirmed his conviction. (Doc. No. 13-19.) Regarding 9 Petitioner's two priors, the Court of Appeal concluded "[t]he trial court here could 10 reasonably construe the attempted robbery and the attempted murder as arising from 11 multiple, distinct acts. The court could conclude that Hillard first committed attempted 12 robbery as an accomplice to the co-defendant's forceful assault on the store owner, and 13 then separately committed attempted murder by repeatedly shooting the owner." (Id. at 14 23.)

15 Petitioner subsequently filed a petition for review with the California Supreme 16 Court, making the same arguments. (Doc. No. 13-20); see also People v. Hillard, 17 S143767 (Cal. filed May 26, 2006). The petition was summarily denied "without 18 prejudice to any relief to which defendant might be entitled after the United States 19 Supreme Court determines in Cunningham v. California, No. 05-6551, the effect of 20 Blakely v. Washington (2004)) 542 U.S. 296 and United States v. Booker (2005) 543 21 U.S. 220, on California law." (Doc. No. 13-22); see also People v. Hillard, S143767 22 (Cal. Aug. 18, 2006).

23 On February 26, 2007, shortly after Cunningham v. California, 549 U.S. 270 24 (2007), was decided, Petitioner filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus in California 25 Superior Court. (Doc. No. 13-23); see also Hillard v. Felker, HC18820 (Cal. Super. Ct.
26 filed Feb. 26, 2007). He argued that (1) he received ineffective assistance of counsel 27 based on trial counsel's failure to move to suppress evidence, (2) his sentence was cruel 28 and unusual, and (3) the consecutive sentences were improper absent a jury finding the 1 crimes occurred on separate occasions. (Id.) The petition was denied on April 25, 2007.

2 (Doc. No. 13-24.)

3 On June 16, 2007, Petitioner filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus with the 4 California Court of Appeal, raising the same arguments as before the Superior Court.
5 (Doc. No. 13-25); see also In re Maurice Hillard, D051127 (Cal. Ct. App. Filed June 16, 6 2007). The petition was denied on September 6, 2007. (Doc. No. 13-26.)

7 On November 30, 2007, Petitioner filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus in the 8 California Supreme Court raising the same arguments. (Doc. No. 13-27); see also Hillard 9 v. Scribner, S158679 (Cal. filed Nov. 30, 2007). The petition was summarily denied on 10 May 21, 2008. (Doc. No. 13-28.)

11 On September 30, 2008, Petitioner filed a federal habeas petition in the Southern 12 District of California. Hillard v. Small, No. 08-1786-DMS-RBB (S.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 13 2008). The petition reallaged many of the claims Petitioner raised on direct appeal with 14 the state court. The petition was denied on the merits on September 9, 2010. Hillard v.
15 Small, No. 08-1786-DMS-RBB (S.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2010), ECF No. 36. Subsequently 16 both the district court and the Ninth Circuit denied Petitioner a certificate of 17 appealability. Id., EFC Nos. 36, 43.

18 On November 6, 2012, California voters approved Proposition 36, which 19 substantially amended California's Three Strike Law. See People v. Yearwood, 213 20 Cal.App.4th 161, 167 (2013). The proposition "diluted the three strike law by reserving 21 the life sentence for cases where the current crime is a serious or violent felony . . . [and] 22 created a postconviction release proceeding whereby a prisoner who is serving an 23 indeterminate life sentence imposed pursuant to the three strikes law for a crime that is 24 not a serious or violent felony and who is not disqualified, may have his or her sentence 25 recalled and be resentenced as a second strike offender." Id. at 167-68.

26 Petitioner filed a petition to recall his sentence pursuant to Proposition 36 on 27 January 15, 2015. (Doc. No. 13-32 at 33-65); see also People v. Hillard, SCD178097 28 (Cal. Super. Ct. filed Jan. 15, 2015). On January 28, 2015, the Superior Court denied the petition because Proposition 36 excluded relief for persons convicted of attempted murder and, in any event, the petition was untimely. (Doc. No. 13-32 at 92-93.) Petitioner appealed the Superior Court’s denial to the California Court of Appeal. (Doc. No. 13-33.) His appointed counsel filed an Anders brief requesting the court independently review the record for arguable issues and pointed out the potential issues of whether Petitioner’s sentence should be reconsidered in light of subsequent cases and propositions. (Id.) Petitioner filed a supplemental pro se brief, raising the claims presented in the current federal habeas petition. (Doc. No. 13-34.) He argued that he had timely filed his petition for recall under the mailbox rule of Houston v. Lack, 487 U.S. 266 (1988) (holding that a pro se prisoner’s federal notice of appeal is deemed filed when it is handed to the prison officials for mailing), and attached supporting exhibits. (Id.) Petitioner also argued that he should be resentenced in light of People v. Vargas, 59 Cal. 4th 635 (2014), which recognized that in rare occasions multiple convictions should not count as separate strikes. (Doc. No. 13-34.) Finally, he argued that his conviction for attempted murder could not count as a prior because there had been prosecutorial misconduct. (Id. at 21-23.) The California Court of Appeal affirmed the denial of Petitioner’s petition to recall. (Doc. No. 13-35.)

Petitioner subsequently filed a petition for review in the California Supreme Court challenging the appellate court’s affirmance. (Doc. No. 13-36); see also People v. Hillard, S228218 (Cal. filed Aug. 5, 2015). The California Supreme Court summarily denied the petition on September 23, 2015. (Doc. No. 13-37.)

DISCUSSION

I. LEGAL STANDARDS FOR § 2254 HABEAS PETITION

Federal habeas petitions filed after April 24, 1996 are governed by the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (“AEDPA”). Pub.L. 104-132, 110 Stat. 1214. If an applicant challenges the legality of their confinement arising from a state court judgment, federal courts may only review whether the confinement violates “the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. 2254(a); accord Lewis v.

1 Jeffers, 497 U.S. 764, 780 (1990) (“federal habeas corpus relief does not lie for errors of 2 state law”). A writ will only issue if the adjudication of the state judgment “(1) resulted 3 in a decision that was contrary to, or involved the unreasonable application of, clearly 4 established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or (2) 5 resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in 6 light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.” 28 U.S.C. 2254(d). This 7 standard is “difficult to meet,” “highly deferential,” and “demands that state-court 8 decisions be given the benefit of the doubt.” Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. 170, 181 9 (2011) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). Moreover, “[t]he petitioner 10 carries the burden of proof.” Id. Thus, “[h]abeas corpus is an ‘extraordinary remedy’ 11 available only to those ‘persons whom society has grievously wronged’” Juan H. v.
 12 Allen, 408 F.3d 1262, 1270 (9th Cir. 2005) (quoting Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S.
 13 619, 633-34 (1993)).

14 Under § 2254(d)(1), a federal court may grant habeas relief only if the state court’s 15 decision “was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established 16 Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States.” 28 U.S.C.
 17 § 2254(d)(1). Section 2254(d)(1)’s “contrary to” and “unreasonable application” clauses 18 have independent meanings. Bell v. Cone, 353 U.S. 685, 694 (2002). Under the 19 “contrary to” clause, a court may issue a writ if “the state court applies a rule different 20 from the governing law set forth in [Supreme Court] cases, or if it decides a case 21 differently than [the Supreme Court has] done on a set of materially indistinguishable 22 facts.” Id. at 694. In contrast, a court may issue a writ under the “unreasonable 23 application” clause if “the state court correctly identifies the governing legal principle 24 from [the Supreme Court’s] decisions but unreasonably applies it to the facts of a 25 particular case.” Id. To satisfy this unreasonable application prong, the state court’s 26 decision must have been more than “just incorrect or erroneous;” it must have been 27 “objectively unreasonable.” Wiggins v. Smith, 539 U.S. 510, 520 (2003); see also 28 Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86, 101 (2011) (“A state court’s determination that a claim lacks merit precludes federal habeas relief so long as ‘fairminded jurists could disagree’ on the correctness of the state court’s decision.”). Under either the “contrary to” or “unreasonable application” prong, the “clearly established” phrase refers only to “holdings, as opposed to the dicta, of [the Supreme] Court’s decisions as of the time of the relevant state-court determination.” Lockyer v. Andrade, 538 U.S. 63, 71 (2003) (quoting Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 412 (2000)). Circuit court precedent does not satisfy the “clearly established” element. Parker v. Matthews, 132 S. Ct. 2148, 2155 (2012). In reviewing claims under § 2254(d)(1), a federal court “is limited to the record that was before the state court that adjudicated the claim on the merits.” Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. 170, 181-82 (2011).

Under § 2254(d)(2), a federal court may grant habeas relief only if the state court’s decision “resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.” 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2). Section 2254(d)(2) “requires that [the federal habeas court] accord the state trial court substantial deference.” Brumfield v. Cain, 135 S. Ct. 2269, 2277 (2015). “[A] state-court factual determination is not unreasonable merely because the federal habeas court would have reached a different conclusion in the first instance.” Wood v. Allen, 558 U.S. 290, 301 (2010). So long as reasonable minds reviewing the record could agree with the finding in question, the trial court’s determination will stand, id., and a petitioner bears the “burden of rebutting this presumption by clear and convincing evidence,” 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1).

Under either § 2254(d)(1) or § 2254(d)(2), a federal habeas court looks to the last reasoned state-court decision. Castellanos v. Small, 766 F.3d 1137, 1145 (9th Cir. 2014); Murray v. Schriro, 745 F.3d 984, 996 (9th Cir. 2014). Thus, when there is an unexplained decision from the state’s highest court, the federal habeas court “looks through” to the last reasoned state court decision and presumes that the unexplained opinion rests on the same grounds. Ylst v. Nunnemaker, 501 U.S. 797, 801-06 (1991). And even if the state court’s decision is entirely void of an explanation, “the habeas petitioner's burden still must be met by showing there was no reasonable basis for the state court to deny relief." Richter, 562 U.S. at 98.

Finally, federal habeas courts apply a harmless error-standard when reviewing constitutional error committed by the state trial court. Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619, 637-38 (1993). A habeas petitioner is only "entitled to habeas relief based on trial error [if] they can establish that it resulted in 'actual prejudice.'" Id. (quoting United States v. Lane, 474 U.S. 438, 449 (1986)). Put another way, petitioner must show there is more than a "reasonable possibility" that the trial error had a "substantial and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury's verdict." Id. (quoting Kotteakos v. U.S., 328 U.S. 750, 776 (1946)); accord Fry v. Pliler, 551 U.S. 112, 116 (2007); Davis v. Ayala, 135 S. Ct. 2187, 2198 (2015) ("There must be more than a 'reasonable possibility' that the error was harmful.") (quoting Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637).

II. ANALYSIS

Petitioner's previous federal habeas petition challenging his conviction was denied on the merits and both the district court and the Ninth circuit denied certificates of appealability. Hillard v. Small, No. 08-1786-DMS-RBB (S.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2010), ECF No. 36; Hillard v. Small, No. 10-56581 (9th Cir. Oct. 8, 2010), ECF No. 6. Thus, present petition only challenges the denial of resentencing under California Penal Code § 1170.126. See Magwood v. Patterson, 561 U.S. 320, 331-33 (2010) ("Thus, both § 2254(b)'s text and the relief it provides indicate that the phrase "second or successive" must be interpreted with respect to the judgment challenged."); 28 U.S.C. § 2244 (generally prohibiting successive habeas petitions). Petitioner argues the state court's failure to resentence him violated his Fourteenth Amendment Due Process rights. The Court disagrees.

A. Three Strikes Priors

Petitioner argues the state court's denial of his petition to recall his sentence violated his Fourteenth Amendment Due Process rights because it was founded on materially incorrect information concerning his criminal history. (Doc. No. 1 at 9-18.)

1 Prior to sentencing, Petitioner argued that his prior convictions for attempted robbery and 2 attempted murder should only count as one strike, for purpose of the Three Strikes Law, 3 because they arose from a single event. (Doc. No. 13-9 at 8-13.) The trial court, 4 however, rejected this argument and on review the California Court of Appeal affirmed 5 the ruling. The Court of Appeal found the trial court:

6 “could reasonably construe the attempted robbery and the attempted murder 7 as arising from multiple, distinct acts. The court could conclude that Hillard 8 first committed attempted robbery as an accomplice to a co-defendant’s 9 forceful assault on the store owner, and then separately committed attempted 10 murder by repeatedly shooting the owner. . . . The trial court did not abuse 11 its discretion in concluding that Hillard’s conduct of escalating the criminal conduct by repeatedly shooting the victim justified punishing him on the basis of two, rather than one, strike prior conviction.”

12 (Doc. No. 13-19 at 22-24.)

13 Following the passage of Proposition 36, Petitioner re-raised this argument in his 14 motion to recall his sentence, (Doc. No. 13-32 at 33-65), but the court concluded relief 15 was categorically unavailable because of Petitioner’s prior conviction for attempted 16 murder. (Doc. No. 13-32 at 92-93.)

17 Petitioner’s present habeas review is limited to the decision to deny his motion to 18 recall. See 28 U.S.C. § 2244. The superior court found relief under People v. Vargas, 59 19 Cal.4th 635 (2014), was unavailable because one of Petitioner’s prior convictions was for 20 attempted murder. Additionally, the motion was untimely. (Doc. No. 13-32 at 92-93.)
 21 And the court of appeals affirmed on the same grounds, noting that Petitioner’s Three 22 Strikes argument was “[ir]relevant to this appeal from an order denying his petition on 23 ineligibility grounds.” (Id. at 5.) Finally, the California Supreme Court summarily 24 denied his petition for review. (Doc. No. 13-37.)

25 Because the state courts rejected Petitioner’s motion to recall on the grounds he 26 was categorically ineligible, Petitioner can find no relief in Burke. In Burke, the United 27 States Supreme Court held that a prisoner’s due process is violated when he is sentenced 28 “on the basis of assumptions concerning his criminal record which were materially

1 untrue.” 334 U.S. at 741; see also Roberts v. U.S., 445 U.S. 552, 563 (1980) (“As a 2 matter of due process, an offender may not be sentenced on the basis of mistaken facts or 3 unfounded assumptions.”) (citing Burke, 334 U.S. at 740-41). But Petitioner’s motion to 4 recall was denied because he was previously convicted of attempted murder and his 5 motion was untimely. Thus, the denial of Petitioner’s motion to recall was not based on 6 the assumptions regarding Petitioners criminal record.

7 Furthermore, even if we were to reach the merits of Petitioner’s Three Strikes 8 argument, it fails because the conclusion that Petitioner’s prior convictions constituted 9 two strikes is a matter of state law and the court did not rely on materially incorrect facts 10 in applying it. Because none of the courts reviewing the motion to recall addressed 11 Petitioner’s Three Strike argument, we “look through” them to the last reasoned state 12 court decision, the superior court order denying Hillard’s state habeas petition, which 13 stated:

14 Petitioner argues that, like the defendant in Vargas, he received a 15 three-strike term due to his two prior strike convictions for different 16 crimes—here, attempted murder and attempted robbery—which, he asserts, 17 arose from the commission of the same act on the same victim. As a result, 18 Petitioner contends, Vargas requires that the court dismiss one of his prior 19 strikes and modify his sentence accordingly.

20 When the Fourth District, Division One, heard Petitioner’s appeal in 21 2006, it addressed a similar argument. Petitioner had contended that “the 22 trial court abused its discretion in refusing his request to dismiss one of his 23 two strike prior convictions.” There the court wrote:

24 “The two prior convictions arose from an incident . . .
 25 when Hillard and two co-defendants attempted to rob a jewelry 26 store. One of the co-defendants burst into the store and placed 27 a rifle against the store owner’s chest. The owner grabbed the 28 rifle away and the co-defendant fled from the store, yelling to Hillard and the other co-defendant to “get him.” The owner pulled a pistol from his pocket but before he could fire the weapon, Hillard shot the owner in the arm with a rifle and then continued shooting. The owner was struck seven more times,

1 three times in the chest, three times in the leg, and once on his 2 nose.

3 “Hillard requested that the trial court dismiss one of the 4 strike prior convictions because the offenses had been 5 committed almost 20 years earlier and constituted only one 6 event, and his current offenses were property crimes that did 7 not involve the use of weapons. The trial court . . . noted that 8 although only one victim was involved in the prior offenses 9 Hillard fired several shots from the gun, and he thereafter 10 committed himself to a life of carefully planned thievery. On 11 appeal, Hillard challenges the court’s ruling, contending that his 12 two strike priors arose out of a single act. . . .”

13 The Court of Appeal rejected Petitioner’s argument:

14 “The trial court here could reasonably . . . conclude that 15 Hillard first committed attempted robbery as an accomplice to a 16 co-defendant’s forceful assault on the store owner, and then 17 separately committed attempted murder by repeatedly shooting 18 the owner. Although Hillard may have been trying to stop the 19 store owner from shooting his accomplice, he nevertheless 20 made a decision to shoot rather than flee, and further to 21 repeatedly shoot rather than to shoot only once. . . . The trial 22 court did not abuse its discretion in concluding the Hillard’s 23 conduct of escalating the criminal conduct by repeatedly 24 shooting the victim justified punishing him on the basis of two, 25 rather than one, strike prior conviction.

26 “The reasonableness of the trial court’s decision . . . is 27 further supported by (Hillard’s) overall record, showing that he 28 continued his criminal conduct after being released from prison for his 1986 convictions. In 1993, (he) committed a series of commercial burglaries Hillard was released from prison in April 1999, and in 2003 he commenced the spree of offenses involved in the current case. The fact that his poststrike offenses involved commercial burglaries does not detract from the fact that he has emerged as a recidivist criminal targeted by the Three Strikes law. . . .”

1 Notwithstanding the appellate court’s conclusion that Petitioner’s two 2 “strike” priors did not arise from a single act, Petitioner again attempts to 3 characterize the 1986 priors as two convictions “based on the commission of the same act.” His contention still has not merit.

4 In Vargas the court distinguished Vargas’ “multiple criminal 5 convictions stemming from the commission of a single act” from the 6 “multiple criminal acts (albeit committed in a single course of conduct)” by 7 the defendant in People v. Benson (1998) 18 Cal.4th 24. (Vargas, supra, 59 8 Cal.4th at 646, 648, original [emphasis].) Benson had two prior strike 9 convictions (for residential burglary and assault with the intent to commit 10 murder) based on a single incident. Returning a vacuum cleaner he had 11 borrowed from his neighbor, he grabbed her, forced her to the floor, and 12 stabbed her multiple times. (Benson, supra, 18 Cal.4th at 30 (prior strikes arising from the same course of conduct need not be treated as a single strike); see also People v. Fuhrman (1997) 16 Cal.4th 930, 940 (prior strikes arising from the same course of conduct need not be treated as single strike).)

 14 Here, not only are Petitioner’s two “strike” priors more like Benson’s 15 (i.e., two separate acts committed in a single course of conduct) than 16 Vargas’s, but the Court of Appeal has already determined that Petitioner’s 17 two “strike” priors did not arise out of a single act. Further, given 18 Petitioner’s history of recidivism, his case does not fall into that rare 19 category where the facts “demonstrate that not reasonable person would disagree that defendant fell outside the spirit of the Three Strikes law.” (Vargas, supra, 59 Cal.4th at 641-642.) Because the holding in Vargas does not apply to Petitioner’s sentence, the petition is denied as to this ground.

20 (Doc. No. 13-30 at 3-5) (factual citations omitted) (underlining in original).

21 The state court’s lengthy analysis of Petitioner’s argument shows that it was well 22 aware of the factual underpinnings of Petitioner’s criminal history. The court accurately 23 reviewed the factual events leading to his attempted robbery and attempted murder 24 convictions and Petitioner identifies no misstatement of facts. As such, his argument 25 under Burke fails because his sentencing was not based on materially false facts. Indeed, 26 Petitioner’s situation is not even close to the factual scenario in Burke where the 27 defendant was unrepresented and the court assumed, on the record, that defendant was 28

1 guilty of crimes he was previously found not guilty of. Burke, 334 U.S. at 740-41. Here 2 Petitioner was represented, was found guilty of both prior strikes, and his case was 3 subjected to detailed legal review on multiple occasions. This violates no well-4 established federal law and the interpretation of state law is not at issue.

5 Petitioner relies on Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. 307 (holding that a court must 6 view the underlying facts of a conviction in the light most favorable to the prosecution) to 7 argue that because the jury found he inflicted great bodily injury during the commission 8 of the attempted robbery by shooting the shop owner, and also found he committed 9 attempted murder by shooting the shop owner, the state court was required to find the 10 convictions arose from the same act and its decision otherwise was unreasonable under 11 § 2254(d)(2). (Doc. No. 1 at 12-15.) But this is incorrect. Petitioner has not shown that 12 his attempted robbery conviction was predicated on his shooting the victim, only that he 13 received an enhancement because of it. Indeed, viewed in the light most favorable to the 14 prosecution, as required by Jackson, Petitioner could have been convicted of attempted 15 robbery even if he had not fired his gun. See People v. Watkins, 55 Cal. 4th 999, 1019 16 (2012) (listing the elements of attempted robbery as “defendant specifically intended to 17 take property from [the victim] by force or fear, and committed a direct act toward that 18 goal”). And, alternatively, there was nothing in Jackson, to prevent the state court from 19 concluding that Petitioner’s decision to continue shooting the victim after his accomplice 20 had escaped was sufficient to constitute a separate criminal act. As such, the state court’s 21 conclusion that Petitioner’s priors constituted two strikes is no basis for habeas relief in 22 light of the evidence presented. See Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S. 333, 338-39 (2006).

23 Finally, Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief on his first claim because any 24 error was harmless. See Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619, 637-38 (1993) (a habeas 25 petitioner must show actual prejudice to be entitled to relief). Petitioner was not entitled 26 to resentencing under Proposition 36 because it categorically denies relief for prisoners 27 who, like Petitioner, were previously convicted of attempted murder. See Yearwood, 213 28

1 Cal. App. 4th at 167-68. Thus, any refusal to find his prior convictions only constituted 2 one strike, even if error, was harmless at this stage.

3 B. Denial of Petition as Untimely

4 Petitioner also claims that his Fourteenth Amendment Due Process rights were 5 violated when the state court denied his petition to recall his sentence as untimely. (Doc.
 6 No. 1 at 19-33.) At the outset, the Court notes that any error regarding the timeliness of 7 his petition is harmless because the state concluded Petitioner was independently 8 ineligible for relief under Proposition 36 because he had previously been convicted for 9 attempted murder. (Doc. No. 13-32 at 93.) Because he was ineligible, he cannot show 10 “actual prejudice” resulting from the untimeliness finding. See Brecht, 507 U.S. at 637-11 38.

12 In any event, Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief because the state court’s 13 findings of fact are presumed correct and Petitioner has not rebutted the presumption.
 14 The deadline to file a motion to recall under Proposition 36 was November 7, 2014. See 15 Yearwood, 213 Cal. App. 4th at 170, 175 n.4; (accord Doc. No. 13-32 at 92-93). The 16 superior court found that Petitioner’s motion to recall was filed on January 21, 2015, 17 having been signed and mailed to the court on January 15, 2015. (Doc. No. 13-32 at 93.) 18 On appeal, Petitioner argued that his petition was timely under the mailbox rule because 19 he had actually delivered a motion to recall to prison officials for mailing on September 20 30, 2014 even though the superior court never received it. (Doc. No. 13-34 at 19-20.) 21 Petitioner claims that after not receiving an answer to his first motion he sent a second 22 letter, inquiring about the motion’s status, and was informed that no motion to recall was 23 ever received. (Id.) Petitioner then refiled his motion. (Id.) In support of his claim, 24 Petitioner filed (1) the prison mail log showing he mailed something to the superior court 25 on October 1, 2014, (2) a letter dated January 1, 2015, authored by him and addressed to 26 the superior court inquiring as to the status of his motion to recall his sentence, in which 27 he states he submitted that petition to the superior court on September 30, 2014, (3) a 28 reply from the court dated January 8, 2015, indicating the court had never received the

1 petitions, and (4) a letter dated January 15, 2015, authored by him to the superior court 2 resubmitting his motion. Despite the additional documents, the appeals court concluded 3 that “[t]he record demonstrates as the trial court found, Hillard did not sign his petition 4 and the accompanying documents until January 15, 2015. Thus, regardless of problems 5 with the prison’s mail system, there can be no reasonably arguable issue that Hillard’s 6 petition was timely.” (Doc. No. 13-35 at 5.) The appeals court also noted that Petitioner 7 made no attempt to explain why his prior conviction for attempted murder did not 8 disqualify him from relief. (Id.) Subsequently, the California Supreme Court denied 9 Petitioner’s petition for review. (Doc. No. 13-37.)

10 State court findings of fact are presumed to be correct and a habeas petitioner has 11 the burden of rebutting that presumption by clear and convincing evidence. 28 U.S.C.
 12 § 2254(e)(1); accord Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. 231, 240 (2005) (“[t]he standard is 13 demanding but not insatiable”). Here, the appeals court found that Petitioner had not 14 signed his motion to recall until January 15, 2015, well after the deadline had passed, and 15 Petitioner has not provided clear and convincing evidence to rebut the that finding.
 16 Petitioner’s evidence shows that he mailed something on October 1, 2014 but fails to 17 provide any contemporaneous proof of what was mailed. As such, there is no clear and 18 convincing evidence to rebut the court’s conclusion.

19 Even assuming the facts are as Petitioner claims they are, however, Petitioner still 20 cannot identify any federal due process violation that arose from the denial of his petition 21 as untimely. In Houston v. Lack, 487 U.S. 266 (1988), the United States Supreme Court 22 held that, under the Rules of Appellate Procedure, a pro se prisoner’s notice of appeal is 23 deemed “filed at the time petitioner delivered it to the prison authorities for forwarding to 24 the court clerk.” Id. at 276. Petitioner, however, points to no Supreme Court cases

28 ///

1 extending this mailbox rule to state courts as a constitutional requirement.² As such, he is 2 not entitled to habeas relief.

3 C. Attempted Murder Conviction

4 Petitioner's last claim for relief attempts to attack the merits of his 1986 conviction 5 for attempted murder. In his 2015 state motion to recall, Petitioner claimed his 1986
 6 conviction was tainted by prosecutorial misconduct. (See Doc. No. 13-32 at 40-51.)
 7 Petitioner claimed a co-conspirator, Cedric Pratt, testified that his guilty plea had not 8 been induced by any promise from the prosecutors when in fact it had been. (Id.) 9 Without addressing the prosecutorial misconduct argument, the superior court denied his 10 motion to recall and concluded that "[t]he petition reveals that [Petitioner] has a 11 conviction in consolidated cases CR82551/CR 80021 (May 1, 1987) for attempted 12 murder (Penal Code section 664/187). That conviction alone renders him ineligible for a 13 hearing on his case under [Proposition 36]." (Doc No. 13-32 at 93.) Petitioner made the 14 same argument on appeal. (Doc. No. 13-34 at 22-24.) In beginning its analysis of 15 Petitioner's arguments, the court of appeals noted that "[w]e must keep in mind that the 16 mechanism permitting recall of a final judgment in this case is solely the statutory 17 scheme created in the reform of the three strikes law. Thus, in searching for reasonably 18 arguable issues for reversal, we are not permitted to roam at large through the history of 19 the 2004 convictions." (Doc. No. 13-35 at 2.) Subsequently, the court concluded that 20 "Hillard's brief makes no attempt to dispute the fact of his prior conviction for attempted 21 murder. Nor does the brief attempt to show that such prior conviction does not disqualify 22 him for relief under the proposition." (Doc. No. 5.)

23 The relief Petitioner seeks under Proposition 36 is a state-law question and a 24 federal habeas court cannot review that issue. Bradshaw v. Richey, 546 U.S. 74, 76 25

26
 27 ² In Huizar v. Carey, 273 F.3d 1220 (9th Cir. 2001), the Ninth Circuit extended the Houston holding to 28 state habeas petitions filed by state prisoners. Id. at 1222. Nevertheless, Ninth Circuit precedent cannot satisfy the clearly established requirement of AEDPA. Marshall v. Rodgers, 133 S.Ct. 1446, 1450 (2013).

(2005) (“We have repeatedly held that a state court’s interpretation of state law, including one announced on direct appeal of the challenged conviction, binds a federal court sitting in habeas corpus.”). Furthermore, any habeas relief at present is limited because Petitioner’s previous habeas petition, as to the underlying conviction, was denied on the merits. Hillard v. Small, No. 08-1786-DMS-RBB (S.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2010), ECF No. 36; Hillard v. Small, No. 10-56581 (9th Cir. Oct. 8, 2010), ECF No. 6.

Petitioner attempts to recast the court of appeals decision as a federal constitutional issue by arguing the state courts denied him his Fourteenth Amendment Due Process rights. (Doc. No. 1 at 25.) Petitioner cites to Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322 (2003), in support of this argument, claiming the case stands for the proposition that state courts must give full consideration to evidence present by a petitioner. (Id. at 25-27.) But the holding in Miller-El is inapposite. At issue in Miller-El was what “standards AEDPA imposes before a court of appeals may issue a [certificate of appealability] to review a denial of habeas relief in the district court.” 537 U.S. at 327. And because this issue is not presented here, Miller-El cannot serve as a precedential predicate for any relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). See Wright v. Van Patten, 552 U.S. 120, 125 (2008) (interpreting § 2254(d)’s “clearly established” requirement to mean Supreme Court precedent that “squarely addresses the issue in [the] case”).

Furthermore, Petitioner may not attack the attempted murder conviction used as an enhancement because it is a settled conviction. “[O]nce a state conviction is no longer open to direct or collateral attack in its own right . . . the conviction may be regarded as conclusively valid. If that conviction is later used to enhance a criminal sentence, the defendant generally may not challenge the enhanced sentence through a petition under § 2254 on the ground that the prior conviction was unconstitutionally obtained.” Lackawanna County Dist. Attorney v. Coss, 532 U.S. 394, 403-04 (2001) (citation omitted). Petitioner’s conviction for attempted murder is no longer subject to appeal or collateral attack and, thus, cannot be challenged here. As a result, the Court denies the petition for habeas corpus and also denies Petitioner’s request for an evidentiary hearing as moot. See Lackawanna County Dist. Attorney, 532 U.S. at 403-04; see also Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. 170, 185-86 (“Section 2254(e)(2) imposes a limitation on the discretion of federal habeas courts to take new evidence in an evidentiary hearing.”).

D. Certificate of Appealability

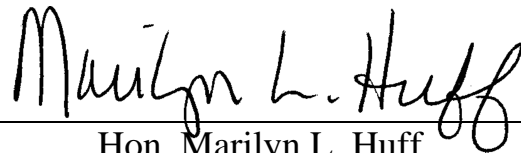

An appeal cannot be taken from the district court’s denial of a §2254 motion unless a certificate of appealability is issued. See 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(1). A certificate may be issued only if the defendant “has made a substantial showing of the denial of a constitution right.” 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). When a district court has rejected petitioner’s constitutional claims on the merits, petitioner “must demonstrate that reasonable jurists would find the district court’s assessment of the constitutional claims debatable or wrong.” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473 (2000). Petitioner has not shown this Court’s conclusion is debatable or wrong and thus, the Court denies Petitioner a certificate of appealability.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court denies Petitioner’s §2254 petition for habeas corpus, denies his motion for summary judgment, denies his request for an evidentiary hearing, and adopts the magistrate judge’s Report and Recommendation to deny the petition for habeas corpus. Finally, the Court denies a certificate of appealability.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
